HOME RELAUNCH PLAN

Quick-Win ROI Checklist

WITHOUT A MAJOR RENO

Prepared for: _____

Buyers decide in seconds whether a home feels "move-in ready" or "work." These five low-cost fixes change that first impression. Tick off what's done, and we'll talk through which ones matter most for your home and your price point.

1 Repaint the main living areas

One of the cheapest ways to change how a room feels. Warm neutrals let buyers picture their own things.

- ☐ Living room and kitchen walls
- ☐ Scuffed trim, doors and baseboards
- ☐ Bold or dark accent walls toned down
- ☐ Ceiling stains touched up

2 Swap out dated hardware

Old pulls and yellowed switch plates signal "work." New ones tell buyers the home has been cared for.

- ☐ Kitchen and bath cabinet pulls
- ☐ Switch plates and outlet covers
- ☐ Front door handle and house numbers
- ☐ Bathroom faucet or light if very dated

3 Clear surfaces and corners

Visual clutter shrinks a room fast. Buyers pay for space, so show all of it.

- ☐ Countertops down to 2-3 items
- ☐ Shoes and coats out of the entry
- ☐ Nothing stacked in corners
- ☐ Closets half empty

4 Improve the lighting

Every room should feel bright by day and warm by night. Dark rooms photograph small.

- ☐ Burnt-out or mismatched bulbs replaced
- ☐ A lamp added to any dim corner
- ☐ Curtains and blinds pulled back
- ☐ Windows cleaned inside and out

5 Edit the furniture

Small layout changes make a space feel larger and easier to live in.

- ☐ One chair pulled from each busy room
- ☐ Clear walking paths through every room
- ☐ Rugs shifted to define spaces
- ☐ Personal photos packed away

Before you spend on bigger projects, call me first. Some upgrades pay back in your price and some don't, and it depends on what's selling near you right now. I'll tell you which is which.
